

Ordinance clears way for Jallikattu today

The youth protests in Tamil Nadu, controlled and non-violent, against the ban on Jallikattu could well be one of the most successful mass movements in the country

T E NARASIMHAN & PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Chennai, 21 January

The President of India and the Governor of Tamil Nadu on Saturday gave their nods to an ordinance allowing the bull taming sport of Jallikattu in Tamil Nadu. This marks the end of a five-day protest by students and youth across the state. Jallikattu will now take place after a gap of three years on Sunday and Monday across Tamil Nadu. Tamil Nadu Chief Minister O Panneerselvam is expected to inaugurate a Jallikattu event in Alanganallur, Madurai district, which is famous for the sport, on Sunday at 10 am. In other areas, ministers from respective regions will inaugurate the sport at 11 am, Panneerselvam said. "I urge the youths, students and the general public to make the Jallikattu events across Tamil Nadu a grand success by participating in large numbers," he said.

As the state-wide protests, including at the Marina beach, entered the fifth day, Panneerselvam said the assent of President Pranab Mukherjee to amend the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1960, was received last night. "The assent for the ordinance (amending the PCA Act) has been obtained from the Governor also," he said, adding, "Our dream to conduct Jallikattu this year has come true." He said a draft Bill to replace the ordinance and amend the PCA Act paving the way for holding Jallikattu without any hindrance will be introduced and adopted in the Assembly session, which begins on January 23. He also thanked Prime Minister Narendra Modi for his support to Jallikattu. "On behalf of the government and people of Tamil Nadu, I thank you for all your support and assistance in enabling Jallikattu to be held in Tamil Nadu once again during the Pongal season, upholding the culture and tradition of the people of Tamil Nadu," he wrote to Modi in a letter. While experts said this was a temporary win, it was also regarded as a great achievement for student movement. The unprecedented youth protests in the state, controlled and non-violent, against the ban on Jallikattu could well be one of the most successful mass movements in the country. The sport was banned by the UPA government in 2011 on grounds of cruelty against animals. In May 2014, the ban was reinforced by the Supreme Court, stating that bulls cannot be used as performing animals including bullock-cart races. Since then, people have been urging the central government to take steps to allow the sport. This time around, thousands of students took to the streets and camped at locations like Marina Beach in Chennai for more than five days, unwilling to relent till the state and the central government had to take steps to revoke the ban. The prime minister had earlier tweeted saying "We are very proud of the rich culture of Tamil Nadu. All efforts are being made to fulfil the cultural aspirations of Tamil people. Central Government is fully committed to the progress of Tamil Nadu & will always work to ensure the state scales new avenues of progress". Experts said that the ordinance will allow the state to conduct jallikattu, but it has to be made into a law in the next six weeks. "The ordinance can be challenged in the court also. So what we need is a permanent law to allow Jallikattu happen," said one of the supporters. PETA India responded saying, "We await a draft of the new ordinance and shall study it. Of course the judgment of the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India is still pending and the matter remains sub-judice. PETA India's position is that cruelty to animals, children, the elderly, and so on, is morally repugnant. As Mahatma Gandhi said, 'The greatness of a nation and its moral progress can be judged by the way its animals are treated.' What then will images of men pouncing on a frightened bull, and of bulls, sometimes licoired up, with deliberately broken tails, their eyes full of chili peppers, trying to flee and breaking their bones, of humans getting hurt and killed by panicked bulls, say of our nation? PETA India believes that one day all bloodsports worldwide will be relegated to the history books, even if that day is not today."

Govt looks to cure India with a booster dose for PPP

VEENA MANI/ SANJEEB MUKHERJEE
New Delhi, 21 January

A public-private partnership (PPP) model by which private players can set up screening and treatment facilities in district health centres to treat four non-communicable diseases is in the last stages of preparation. So far, government funding to eradicate the non-communicable diseases in question — chronic pulmonary diseases, renal and chronic kidney diseases, cardiovascular diseases and cancer — has accounted for three per cent of the funds allocated for the National Health Mission.

In addition to the above, it was recommended that diabetes be brought in the PPP ambit. The government is looking at a time-frame of five-seven years for a partnership with the private sector.

A senior official said there were no structured government programmes to deal with non-communicable diseases. Most district health centres lack such facilities. Against the option of setting up such facilities with government funding, requiring a lot of resources and manpower, PPPs will enable creating diagnostic and treatment units in health centres, where the space will be provided by the government and the private service provider will do the rest.

The private player will charge a fee, to be paid by the patient but subsidised by the government. Service providers will be selected through open bidding.

The official said the NITI Aayog, in consultation with major private players, is preparing a model concession agreement for the governments, the Centre and the states, and private service providers.

The NITI Aayog has constituted four working groups to work out the modalities of the agreement and is holding inter-

REVAMPING HEALTH CARE SECTOR

As on March 31, 2015

SUB CENTRES	153,655
PRIMARY HEALTH CENTRES	25,308
COMMUNITY HEALTH CENTRES	5,396

- While these numbers have increased, they are not sufficient to meet the population norm
- The basic idea behind the PPP concept is that presently, there are no properly structured government programmes to deal with non-communicable diseases
- PPP in health care would enable setting up diagnostic and treatment facilities in the health centres
- The space would be provided by the government, while the private service provider does the rest actions with major private players. While states such as Telangana have made their own agreements, players in the field say a concessionaire created by the Centre will make a uniform model for all to follow. The Centre disburses funds through the National Health Mission (NHM). States such as Andhra Pradesh have private players like Nephroplus working to provide dialysis in the PPP mode.

"Any private health care service provider would like to expand its catchment area and PPPs provide it an ideal opportunity to do that," another official said.

As of March 31, 2015, there were 153,655 sub-centres, 25,308 primary health centres (PHCs) and 5,396 community health centres (CHCs) in the country. Private players such as Nephroplus say the government should reconsider issuing tenders on the basis of financial bids. Vikram Vuppala, founder and chief executive officer of Nephroplus, said if the government took the lowest-bidder approach, there could be a compromise on quality. He says, "There should be a penalty of around two per cent of the monthly revenue if any service provider doesn't provide quality treatment."
